AALA'S POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE AND THE 2018 ELECTIONS

AALA members are aware that this is a most challenging political year for public education in California, as we will be electing a new Governor and State Superintendent of Public Instruction. To prepare for the work ahead, AALA has convened our Political Action Committee (PAC) to begin making decisions about which candidates to endorse. Following is information about PACs, in general, and AALA's PAC, in particular.

What is a PAC?

AALA, as a professional employee association, does not actively participate in electoral campaigns; however, the AALA PAC does do so. The PAC is AALA's legal arm for conducting candidate and ballot measure activity. State campaign laws and tax law provisions regarding tax-exempt organizations govern PACs. A PAC is usually part of an overall program to promote an organization's policy goals. AALA's PAC was first organized in 1993 and is governed by bylaws.

AALA members have an option at the time of joining whether to allow $1 of their dues to fund the activities of the PAC; it is not done automatically. When AALA announces that it is donating money to a campaign for an elected position or any political activity, the funds come from the optional donations of members. None of an AALA member's dues is used for political actions unless preauthorized. Currently, there is almost $150,000 in the PAC budget.

Who participates in AALA's PAC, and how does it work?

AALA's PAC consists of two representative groups, the PAC Steering Committee and the PAC Council. The AALA PAC Steering Committee is currently composed of nine members, including:

- The five vice presidents (or designee) of each AALA department—Adult, Elementary, Secondary, School Support, and Unit J: Martha Peralta, Nery Paiz, Rafael Gaeta, Kevin Kilpatrick, Dave Montes
- Five members at large, each representing one of the above five departments, who are active participants in the AALA Representative Assembly: Alfredo Barreras, Mary Jane Lira London, Tracie Bryant, Rosana Jeronimo, Brian Sida
- AALA President Juan A. Flecha
- AALA Strategist David Tokofsky (nonvoting)

The PAC Council is comprised of AALA's Representative Assembly. Endorsements of ballot measures and candidates must be ratified by a sixty percent (60%) vote of the AALA PAC Council. Voting on endorsements is done without candidates or their representatives present. The Representative Assembly meets four times each year. Their next meeting will be Thursday, April 19, 2018.

In which campaigns does the AALA PAC get involved?

Historically, AALA's PAC has supported initiatives that favor public education and candidates who understand, advocate for, and successfully implement ideas and programs beneficial to our members. Above all, our PAC has taken an active interest in ballot measures on funding for public education and LAUSD School Board elections. For example, AALA has supported and donated funds to Board of Education candidates, parcel tax measures, and school bond campaigns. We have also involved ourselves in the campaigns of political candidates who support public education and recognize the essential role administrators play in schools and the District.

In which campaigns is the PAC involved this year?

- Governor's Race (Historically, we have not taken a position in this race.)
- State Superintendent of Public Instruction Election

What has the PAC Steering Committee done to date?

The candidates for Governor and State Superintendent of Public Instruction were invited to interview with the Steering Committee and did so during the week of April 9, 2018. In preparation for the interviews, the committee reviewed and revised the confidential questions that the candidates were going to be asked. All questions were pertinent to public education and AALA's Core Values (see next article).

Dr. Lily Ploski, Assemblyman Tony Thurmond, and Marshall Tuck, candidates for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, participated in telephone interviews with the PAC. Gubernatorial candidates John Chiang and Antonio Villaraigosa also were interviewed via teleconference. Delaine Eastin, candidate for governor, interviewed in person. We had not been able to get on John Cox's or Gavin Newsom's schedules as of press time.

The committee's next important role after conducting the interviews is to make recommendations to the PAC Council for endorsements. By law, the PAC can contribute a maximum amount of $7,300 to the endorsed candidate; it can also choose to give a lesser amount or no amount. These all-important decisions will be ratified at the next Representative Assembly meeting on April 19, 2018.

How can AALA members help? We will keep you informed via the Update regarding our PAC's support for political candidates and ways you can help. Please stay tuned!

AALA'S CORE VALUES

AALA's Political Action Committee (PAC) developed the Core Values listed below to guide the endorsement of candidates for political office. These core values represent living, working values, subject to change based on need.

1. Collective bargaining agreements are fundamental and must be honored, including the provisions related to the evaluation of AALA members. Principals must be the evaluators of teachers and other staff members at their respective school sites.
2. The LAUSD Health Benefits Committee, representing all unions and the District, makes decisions regarding employees' health benefits, including funding.
3. AALA members must be consulted when decisions are being considered that may affect the scope, nature, and conditions of their work and their contractual rights.

4. Each AALA member should report to a single supervisor as opposed to multiple supervisors. Such a structure is essential for clear Districtwide communication, oversight, and evaluation.
5. Administrative assignments must be determined by a fair, merit-based, promotional process.
6. Being an administrator is a year-round responsibility. School-site administrators must have time to prepare adequately for student learning, safety, and staff members' professional development. Both school-site and nonschool-site administrators must be assigned to A Basis (year round) to fulfill all of their professional responsibilities.
7. Administrative ratios, both certificated and classified, must be significantly improved to ensure the safety and welfare of students, provide for the appropriate supervision of instruction, and allow administrators to address mandated tasks and a multitude of initiatives.
8. Since federal- and state-funded programs establish mandates and require supervisory personnel to ensure accountability, communication, and professional development, administrators must be provided optimal resources to fulfill their responsibilities.
9. The LAUSD is an early education, K-12 through adult education district. Resources and services must be provided accordingly.

Brainard Elementary (Jaqueline Kampschroer Shehab, Principal), Carpenter Community Charter (Joseph P. Martinez, Principal), and One Hundred Fifty-Sixth Street Elementary (Sidra V. Dudley, Principal) were not included on the list of 2018 California Distinguished Schools in last week's Update. We apologize for the omission and extend our congratulations to the students, staff, and communities of these three outstanding schools.

HEALTH BENEFITS FAQ— TEENS AT HOME? WHERE DO YOU STORE PRESCRIPTION DRUGS?

How prevalent is teen and young adult abuse of nonmedical prescription drugs?

According to a national survey conducted by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), 12% of young adults 18-25 were the greatest abusers of nonmedical prescription drugs. Among adolescents ages 12 to 17, the survey showed more than 6% abusing nonprescription drugs. Of these teens, 24% indicated they “usually” or “always” combined prescription opioids with other substances, such as marijuana, alcohol, cocaine, tranquilizers, amphetamines, and over-the-counter medications.

How critical is the problem of nonmedical use among teens?

Adolescence is the period of greatest risk for drug experimentation and for becoming addicted. The brain is still developing, and exposure to drugs can interfere with normal growth and development. Teen prescription drug abuse may indicate a pattern of harmful behaviors that could eventually lead to substance use disorder (dependence) and/or mental disorders (major mood swings, depression), not to mention the risk of overdose.

What does research tell us about securing and monitoring prescription drugs in the home?

Research published in 2014 asked parents of teens about how they stored and kept track of their prescriptions drugs in the home. The study found that most parents had one or more prescription drugs in the home and that very few took precautions against their own teens accessing them. Why? Parents said they did not think their teens had any interest in their drugs, and that they did not think their drugs could be used to get high. Prescription drugs that could be used for nonmedical purposes found in homes included pain relievers (opioid), depressants or tranquilizers, and stimulants.

The findings of the study showed:

- Most prescriptions were stored in parents' bedrooms, usually in a dresser drawer, in medicine cabinets in the bathroom, or in drawers or cupboards in the kitchen.
- Teens overwhelmingly obtained drugs for nonmedical use from their home, friends, and relatives.
- Parents who were not very concerned about easy access to their medication indicated their teen was unlikely to be interested in them, or that some of their drugs had expired dates that led them to believe the drugs had lost their potency.
- Drug prescriptions used by teens included tranquilizers to help with sleeping, stimulants to improve concentration and improve energy or alertness, and opioids for pain relief.
- Parents monitored teen prescriptions in different ways, such as counting pills, memorizing the exact placement of medical containers in the cabinet, and distributing their teen's medication, so they take only the amount prescribed.
- Parents realized that their teens may be taking their (parents') prescription drugs when they noticed:
 - Empty or almost empty bottles of prescription medications
 - Running out of medicine sooner than expected
 - Messy or sticky prescription cough syrup containers

What are the implications of the study?

The most important implication is that parents should be aware of the need to secure and monitor prescription drugs in a systematic way. Simply stated, lock up your current prescription medications, dispose of unused and expired medication, and keep a count of how many pills/doses you have used or have left. By doing this, you are sending a message to your teen that nonmedical use of prescription drugs is not acceptable. Be aware of warning signs of drug abuse—red, swollen glazed eyes, mood changes, and health complaints, to name a few symptoms. Lastly, talk with your teen about prescription drug dangers.

SCHOOL SAFETY HAS ACTUALLY IMPROVED

According to a report released last month by the National Center for Education Statistics and the Bureau of Justice Statistics, U.S. schools have become safer and rates of student victimization have declined over the last twenty years. Contrary to public perception, deaths occurring at school have not significantly increased despite the recent spate of mass shootings.

Since the Parkland, Florida shooting, many new state and federal bills have been passed aiming to increase funding for violence prevention measures; however the federal data show that schools are already well equipped with these measures, which include teacher training and physical security elements. The graphics below from the annual report Indicators of School Crime and Safety 2017 show the changes in school safety.

LITTLE CHANGE

Number of student, staff, and other nonstudent school-associated violent deaths, and number of homicides and suicides of youth ages 5–18 at school

	1994-95	2014-15
Number of student, staff, and other nonstudent school-associated violent deaths	48	47
Homicides of youth ages 5-18 at school	28	20
Suicides of youth ages 5-18 at school	7	9

TAKEAWAY: Contrary to popular belief, the number of deaths at school has not increased significantly in recent years. A snapshot shows the most recent federal data are comparable to the data from 20 years ago.

TOTAL STUDENT VICTIMIZATION

Rate of nonfatal victimization against students ages 12–18

RATE PER 1,000 STUDENTS

TAKEAWAY: Victimization includes criminal incidents such as theft, assault, robbery, and sexual assault. Federal data show declines in all categories of victimization, including serious violent offenses.

DON'T BE A VICTIM OF A PHONE SCAM

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) reported that it received more than 7 million complaints about unwanted telemarketing calls in 2017, which was an increase of over 34 percent from the previous year. Many of these calls were likely to be illegal scams involving a wide range of tactics, from bogus alerts about banking activities to IRS impersonators threatening incarceration and lawsuits. In addition, there is a rise in what is called neighbor spoofing — a tactic in which scammers use a fake caller ID number that matches your area code and the first three digits of your phone number so consumers think the call is local. These callers are trying to trick you into giving out or confirming personal information that can be subsequently used in fraudulent activity. Not only are you more likely to pick up the phone when it rings, but the fake phone number makes it more difficult for authorities to track. Because it is easy for the scammer to get around call blocking, it is generally best not to answer calls from unknown numbers like these. Also, watch out for calls from your own number. Scammers may use it hoping your curiosity will override any reasonable caution.

Other potential scams include:

- New Medicare cards will be issued between April 2018 and April 2019, which are supposed to provide better protection against fraud and identify theft because they will use a special 11-digit number instead of your social security number. Beware of callers who claim that they must verify a Social Security number or other sensitive information in order to issue the new card, or they may insist on payment for it via money wire, credit card, or gift card. Know that there is no fee for the new Medicare card and no action that beneficiaries need to take in order to receive them. Furthermore, a legitimate Medicare representative will never ask for personal information via phone or email, and official correspondence from Medicare is sent via U.S. mail.
- Smishing: This is a cell phone version of email phishing and occurs when an attacker contacts you by text usually claiming to be from your financial institution. In many cases, they will tell you that there is a problem with your account in order to get you to reveal sensitive banking details such as your account number, password, or PIN. For example, you might be asked to provide certain details in order to unlock your account, told to call a fraud prevention hotline, or click on a link to a fraudulent website. As with your email, do not assume that a text message is authentic, and be aware that financial institutions like credit unions and banks will never ask you to reveal security details such as your PIN or password over the phone or via text. Even if a caller appears to be contacting you from a legitimate number, keep in mind that it could be spoofed. To check the status of your account and any possible fraudulent activity, call the number on the back of your credit or debit card right away.
- The Jury Duty Scare: These are scams in which callers threaten citizens with arrest for failure to show up for jury duty. Typically, scammers tell potential victims that they have missed jury duty, a warrant has been issued, and they must pay a fee immediately to avoid being arrested. Sometimes they will call with a seemingly innocuous request to verify your information for future jury duty and may have caller ID that looks as though it is from the courthouse or police agency. Be advised, no member of a law enforcement agency will contact you by phone to demand money and agencies do not provide warnings by phone about an impending arrest.
- Tax Scams: The IRS will not call you with a demand for immediate payment, and they will not demand a specific form of payment to settle your debt or ask for financial information over the phone. The only way the IRS will get in touch with you is through the mail, on official letterhead, but be aware that tricksters may try to convince you that they have previously attempted to contact you by mail but that their correspondence was returned. If you get a call like this, hang up the phone. You can report the incident to <http://bit.ly/IRSImpersonationScamReport> or call the hotline at 800.366.4484.

- Tech Support: If someone claiming to be from Microsoft, Apple, or another tech company calls to ask if you have had computer problems, just say no and hang up. No one is watching your computer for signs of a virus and these scammers are trying to install malware on your computer. Another tactic scammers are using is saying they are from the FTC and need to access your computer to issue a refund you are owed.
- Can you hear me? You might receive a recorded call from a home security agency, a cruise line, or even associated with Social Security. After the introduction, the recording will ask if you can hear the caller clearly. If you answer “yes,” there is a possibility the scam artist has recorded you and will use the response to sign you up for a product or service, and then demand payment. If you refuse to pay, the caller may use your recorded “yes” to confirm your purchase agreement. The FCC issued a consumer alert last year against such scams because they are so prevalent.

To protect yourself from telephone scams:

- Do not answer a call from an unrecognized number. Hang up immediately if you do happen to answer it.
- Do not always rely on caller ID. Check the number against the legitimate website to verify that the call is authentic.
- Never provide or confirm your personal information.
- Be suspicious of any caller pressuring you to take immediate action.
- Register your home and mobile phone numbers with the National Do Not Call Registry (www.donotcall.gov). If your number is on the registry and you still get calls, they are probably from scammers ignoring the law. Hang up, and report them at the same website.
- Do not pay for something just because you will get a “free” gift.
- Check out a charity before you give. Ask how much of your donation actually goes to the charity. Ask the caller to send you written information so you can make an informed decision without being pressured, rushed, or guilted into it.
- Do not agree to any offer for which you have to pay a “registration” or “shipping” fee.
- Beware of offers to help you recover money you may have lost. Callers who say they are law enforcement officers who will help you get your money back for a fee are scammers.
- To make a complaint about a rude or abusive caller, even if you already sent them money, call 1.877.382.4357 or visit www.ftc.gov/complaint.
